

Paris Oct. 27th
53 Rue de Verneuil

Ms. A. 9. 2. 6. 36
Dear Caroline.

They have all written, I believe - Anne according to the succession of days, which is a journal - Emma following the the train of events, which is a history. - I will write in the order of ideas, which is a philosophy. - I vainly enough the Philosophy of our land is, the matter on which all of the Atlantic is. It is a necessity of our organization which is, I may say it, since the credit of it is not our own but his, from child to parent, all along the genealogical line back to "Adam which was the son of God." And as the fundamental issue of human life is freedom, I will begin there. I have written for the fall - what may make 16 pages for the Fall, for there are 12 such as this but more finely written. You will get it by next steamer, as to some extent I send it by Edward Davis to England. It illustrates the prejudice question as to a suitable a foundation for institutions. Can't you come to you at once. It goes like to take off the point, simply leave out all that you choose. I hope to find the two or three pieces of a Teym, & will send them next week. I translated it one for the Niles's friend, & ordered the original French to be printed too, but whether I was a six cannot say.

Look at Bowles's in the last record, or as a last chance. I have written by request of the Lomestres to H. B.
Stone requesting her to arrange a translation. If she did I would see to the negro & Yankee pictures, & Desportes would see the negro talk just into the corresponding paragraph of the of. Bombon what it ought to be to make the true impression in France - a row or two, - to give the colour - not local but outward. I see since that it is admitted as in preparation from some other quarter. It is just as likely to be bad as good, if it has been a mere chance book-keeping speculation. Victor Hugo's book is Sent as by Thompson, without any other troubly translated in English.

I have 100 ps for the fair from she gives me too some ^{very valuable} pay letters C. Hunt who is ^{well} what with Melroy's 15 & the 50 I lost the Colonization trigger Daniel Love, ^(not paid) will be a little something. Mrs Postman is to add some articles. Others too, but who I know much I cannot say.

I shall get some subscribers here for the Eastern Advocate. The Political state of France is still at a dead lock, for the same reasons as when you left - The Legitimists still loyal - the Orleans still for a demi-demi-freedom, ^{demi semi Verjourny} The Imperators for ^{from above downwards} despotism, the Republicans for as much liberty for each as will secure the greatest liberty for all, ^{among} the various sets of the social reformers ^{some} for a despotism from below pressing upwards. Some further accident changing the positions & proportions, may at any moment break these fixed facts. But it is a complete reign of terror as yet. So must for freedom.

25 The first thing ought to be friendship.

I hear nothing from Mrs Fuller.
Probably it is because Lady Louisa is dead though I have not heard of that just but from your. I shall enquire it & then write. Some Weyman complains that we shall not had a fortune in Europe to cross the Channel & the river. Mrs Mitchell has not yet replied to my invitation. It was for November, like Mrs F & family's arrived in December. Then the Potters stand propounded. As to Francis' friends here, I leave that to Emma to debate upon. He was here yesterday, reading a little in the life of Mr. Fuller. He can't believe in the sincerity of her character to the degree we do. The Bastard literature not forming a part of her nature, but so foreign to it that it always seemed to astonish her, & to be worn consciously like an embroidered coat just brought home - The Self-inspection - the imitated style all upset him. The last he character-ises in one word, which any French